

16 Hidden Gems of UCity you MUST experience

The Sutter-Meyer House

This is the oldest house in University City and it is absolutely gorgeous. Definitely worth the visit for its historic and monumental significance.

You can schedule a tour or get more information here:

The Green Center

The Green Center is an arts and environmental education organization located in the heart of UCity. If you feel like exploring and learning about native Missouri habitats, you can do so in the comfort of your own neighborhood.

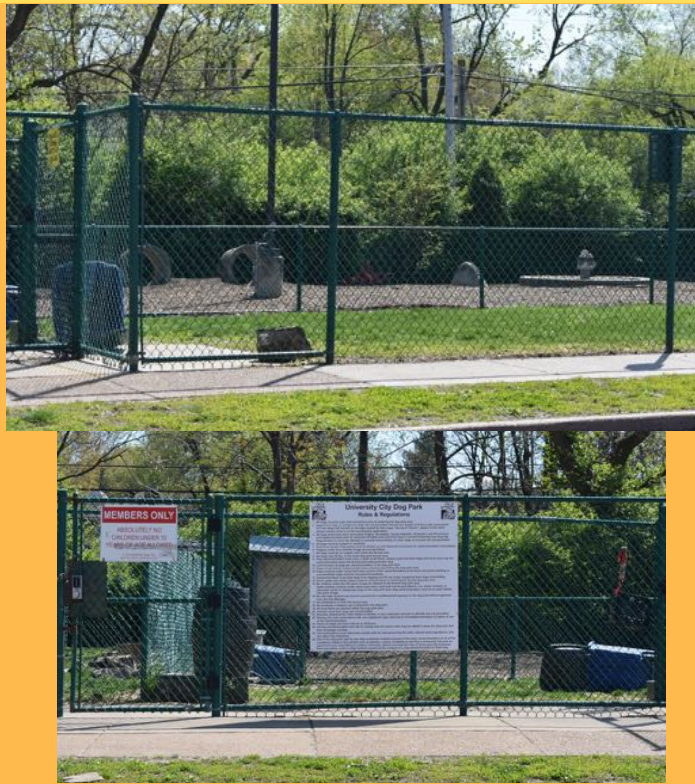

Ackert Walkway

The Ackert Walkway is a secret pedestrian pathway that runs from Delmar Road to Vernon Avenue. It's great, because it also connects Wash-U to the Loop, and it is a safe and convenient way for students to frequent it.

University City Dog Park

This little fenced in park is a dog's paradise, so if you have a dog, definitely check out this gem of a park.

Regional Arts Commission

The Regional Arts Commission is located in The Loop, and I'll bet you didn't know that it functions as an exhibit, performance venue, and a headquarters. Fun Fact: The RAC is the largest nonprofit funder of arts in the region.

UCity in Bloom

UCity in Bloom is a gardening program sponsored by University City. This organization brings beautiful gardens and landscapes to many different areas of UCity, so keep an eye out for their gardens when you're walking around the neighborhood.

Painted Lions

There are colorful painted lions located in various parks and landmarks across UCity, and if you are feeling especially adventurous, try to find them all.

This particular lion is perched on top of the Rec Center in Heman Park.

The Crown Center

The large collection of buildings near the intersection of Hwy 170 and Delmar, is actually a very well rated Jewish senior living home. It is a testament to the large Jewish population in University City and hosts many public events and activities.

You can see their schedule of events here: <https://crowncenterstl.org/events-and-news/>

The Loop Walk of Fame

You may have walked in the Loop, but have you ever payed attention to where your feet were stepping? The Loop walk of fame commemorates St. Louis' Greats, and there are now more than 150 brass stars and plaques lining the sidewalks.

You can get more information here: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/St._Louis_Walk_of_Fame

10

University City Children's Center

Located near the industrial side of UCity, UCCC is a local children's learning center with a large garden and play area. A small oasis of learning.

Olive Supermarket

Located on Olive Blvd in St. Louis' unofficial "ChinaTown", the Olive Supermarket is a fantastic place to shop for international foods. A great place for discovering new foods and flavors.

11

African Market

Did you know UCity not only has a Chinese market, but an African one too? This store is an amazing place to explore, offering unique produce and one of a kind gifts. Definitely a bucket list item.

12

Long Acre Farmers Market

A tiny farmers market and produce stand sits in the parking lot of All Saints Church on Clemens Ave, and holds the key to fresh produce all season. This stand is open year round, and is run by Long Acre Farms.

14

(Frank and Helen's is also known for their broasted chicken, hence the over-sized fowl outside the restaurant.)

Frank & Helen's

A charming local pizza place that is frequented by faithful regulars, Frank & Helen's has been open since 1956.

16

Winslow's Home

Have you been trying to find a place that serves food fresh from the farm? Look no further. This unique restaurant/general store/cafe offers a calm ambiance, with a touch of sophistication, and lots of good foods and beverages.

Pershing Square

Pershing Square is home to a very unique business pairing: A fusion taco joint, and a quirky coffee shop. The best thing to do, is wake up early on a Saturday morning, grab a coffee from Cursed Bikes & Coffee, then head over to Taco Buddha for a delicious breakfast taco.
